Dramatic Club Is Praised For Splendid Work

The comedy drama "Civil Service", played in the Newark grammar school auditorium last Saturday evening, by Frank Jones' Dramatic Club, is considered one of the cleanest and best rendered plays presented in Newark in recent years. The play was given under the auspices of the Newark Women's Improvement Club which societies has been collecting funds to install in the grammar school, a moving picture machine. The play was so well received that Manager Jones has consented to stage it again at an early date for the benefit of the local Catholic Church.

To commend each member of the cast of characters as one would wish to do would take up too much of the Register's valuable space. However, a few words of praise should be given each one for the excellent work done. Manager Jones acted the part of old "R. F. D." a man of mystery. He is too well known in Washington Township to require further comment.

Frank Veit, who acted the part of postal inspector, should resign his present position and enter Uncle Sam's employ. He had one characteristic possessed by few men, he could make love ardently and attend to business at the same time.

Lester Tons, a recent arrival in Newark, sustained the character of a modern postmaster to a nicety. His acting showed a shrewd mixture of business and political sagacity.

Leslie Burdick again sustained in a masterful way the villain's character.

Eldon Beardon, as Golden Wex, the country boy, sustained his part with a true Southern twang that was right there with the girls, and it is to be hoped that he will keep that way as an early marriage might cause the loss of a good fun-maker. He was ably supported by Miss L. Sayles in the role of Birdie Bivins, the hired girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Muller, both well known on the local stage, took the parts of mailing clerk and lady of information respectively.

Miss Helen Veit, as Octavia, the postmaster's daughter, was the female of the species. She thought it perfectly right to be engaged to one young man and to simultaneously accept presents and coddlings from other young men provided the latter were told of the prior engagement at the psychological moment.

A play would not be complete without a strain of true love, and that part was left to the acting of Miss Ruth Hudson, who as Kate Kenyon, the little stamp girl, won the love of the audience.

Miss Elsie Anderson, the collector, had a faculty of collecting bad debts. She should be given a try-out in true life on the Register's delinquent list of subscribers.

Entertainment between acts was furnished by Mrs. White, soloist, Miss Froelick with a monologue; and by Eugene Silva, as violinist.

The sum netted will probably be sufficient to complete the funds needed for the picture machine. When the machine is installed, no grammar school in the State will be better equipped for movies than Newark.

Niles Flowers Create Sensation

A sensation among flower lovers was created in San Francisco recently by a Chinese flower vendor, who appeared on the streets there with a quantity of the flowers, which won the admiration of the hundreds of San Francisco papers.

The flowers were raised by Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Walpert of Niles and are known as the Spanish Bayonet. But very few of them are known to be grown in California.

A number of the flowers have also been presented to prominent Oakland people and have created much comment on this side of the bay also.

Blossom Club Entertains Leader

The Blossom Club of Niles, composed of small boys and girls, gave a party at the gymnasium of the Congregational church last Friday evening as a compliment to their leader and founder of the club, Mrs. F. A. Pinger.

The party was a mask ball affair and was participated in by the Blossoms, their friends and the members of the Winter Assembly, an organization of larger girls, also founded by Mrs. Pinger. A number of the parents attended as spectators.

The costumes of the little folks were marvels of success, many of them being able to entirely keep their identity a secret until the hourcame for unmasking. Following the unmasking punch and cake was served to the dancers and spectators.

Mrs. Pinger wore a dream of cream yellow over which was draped a Spanish Mantella of black lace which has been a possession of Mrs. Pingers' family for more than seventy years. The Mantella has a priceless value and it has been bid for by some of the best known ladies shops of San Francisco, who would use it for show purposes only.

Comparative Cost of Crime and Education In State of California

Much has been written in recent years about the cost of schools in the United States. The cost of education has increased greatly, for the United States is the only Nation in the world giving free high school education. Some states in the Union, and among these California is leading, are not only offering means of union schools and free transportation are giving children in the rural sections schools as good as the best in any of the cities. Of course this costs but this is why it pays to live in the United States.

However, a little of comparative cost may be interesting. In the year 1920-21 crime cost California $55,730,206. The cost of public education in California for 1919 to 1920 including kindergartens, elementary schools and high schools was only $47,455,957. That is, crime in a single year cost California seven and a quarter million dollars more than all its public schools. Moreover statistics gathered by Warden Johnston of San Quentin show that only one in three of the convicts is a graduate of an Elementary School and one in twelve is a high school graduate. From this it is easy to see that the criminal classes are recruited from those who have not had our opportunity to go to school.

The New High School Building

Among those interested in the New High School Building project, two questions are being asked. First what is to be built and second, what will the tax rate be? In answer to the first, it is proposed to build a main academic building consisting of one main building of re-enforced concrete two stories in height with a one-story wing on each side. This will provide the administration offices a rest room for girls, lunch rooms for the boys and for the girls recitation rooms for the various academic lines, a study hall with a library connecting laboratories for the science work and rooms for the work in home economics. An auditarium to seat 820 peopel to be used as a civic center for the Township is to be included in this unit. Also separate from this building there is proposed a shop 120 by 40 feet as designed by the Industrial Commission of the State Board of Education, for the vocational work in various industries. In addition there is to be built a gymnasium 100 by 100 feet to provide for the work in physical education for both boys and girls.

In answer to the second question, the Board of Trustees are in a position to state that the tax rate will be about twenty cents and will under no conceival shrinkage of values exceed twenty-five cents. A twenty cent rate on last years assessed valuation of the District of $10,300,000 would give $20,600.00. If it should be necessary to sell all the bonds, the interest on the full amount plus the first year's payment would be $19,000.00. Therefore the rate would be about twenty cents on the hundred dollars.

Is your child worth twenty cents on the hundred dollars?

Japan Sees Need of Change.

In consequence of the ever-increasing magnitude of Japan's economic relationship with foreign nations it has been found that the Japanese system of weights and measures, which is a relic of the feudal regime, gives rise to considerable difficulty and inconvenience in trade because of its total difference from any accepted system of the world measurements. Accordingly, the question of radical reformation of the existing system has long been considered. It is now reported that after a careful consideration of the subject by a commission, which was established in the department of agriculture and commerce for that purpose, the authorities concerned have reached a decision that the French metric system should be universally adopted.—East and West News.

THE SPORT.

MY BOY, it's the end of the season—
Your campstake you've got in your clo'es;
It isn't much use fer to reason
With you, I suppose.
I know how the dollars are burnin'
A hole in your pocket right now;
You'll blow 'em—what use to be learnin'
A lumberjack how?

They're waitin' down there fer you, brother:
The barkeep is loadin' the gin;
Each guy has some game er another
Fer takin' you in.
The dames thet are plastered an' painted
Are puttin' on powder fer fair—
The ladies whose kisses are tainted
Are waitin' you there.

I've been through the mill, an' I know it—
I know jest the fool thet you are;
Oh, you'll be a sport, an' you'll throw it
In gobs on the bar.
It's "Drinks fer the house!" you'll be yellin';
The bums will be there to partake.
They'll laugh at the stories you're tellin',
An' gobble your stake.

While you have been pullin' a briar,
With beans an' sow-belly to chew,
The grafters have set by the fire
A-waitin' fer you—
The streak up their backs it is yellah,
An' life without work is the rule;
They'll say you're a prince of a fellah
An' think you're a fool.

So work like a dog in the winter,
An' act like an ass in the spring;
Some guy with a jack-knife an' splinter
Will say you're a king.
It's blood, an' it's bone, an' it's muscle,
You're throwin' up there on the bar;
Next week fer a job you kin rustle,
The fool thet you are.

Oh, yes, they all think he's the candy,
A sport, a good fellow, who spends;
I hope, when they say you're a dandy,
You're proud of your friends.
When you know jest how little there's in it,
Will you hand out your good money still?
When you know they're but friends fer a minute?
You proba'ly will.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

BLONDES AND BRAINS

A LEARNED judge was recently quoted as announcing from his bench that he would not approve of blonde ladies as members of a jury which was about to hear a case under his jurisdiction.

"Blondes are fickle," were the words attributed to the justice, intimating that fickleness is a bar to what the law is supposed to assure the person on trial.

A year or so ago a big Western employer in advertising for office help announced that he would not receive the applications of blondes, giving as a reason that he had found them inattentive to work and temperamental in disposition.

There has always been a good deal of discussion regarding the relative attractiveness of blondes and brunettes despite the fact that in the long ago when the caveman was the highest type of civilization, we were all blonde, or at least red hair was the darkest tint.

The reason why nature covered primeval men and women with blonde or red hair was twofold; that it served the same purposes of low visibility which is gained by the animals whose fur coats blend with the surroundings in which they live and the fact that those colors better protected the skin from the effects of direct sunlight.

We know that these colors of hair prevailed because in the discovery of almost every burial place of people of that time light or reddishly tinged hair has been found.

It is interesting to note that the three parts of the body which longest resist the disintegration which follows death are the teeth, the finger nails and the hair, and of these the last two are very nearly of the same character.

Which is getting some little way distant from the contention that blonde women are not fit for jury duty because they are fickle.

Dido, queen of Carthage, of whom Virgil writes in the Aeneid, was not fickle, although she was a blonde. She stuck to her hero through thick and thin and killed herself with a sword that he furnished.

Cleopatra, who had red hair, a shade darker than the real blonde, was not what one might call absolutely constant in her devotions, but in modern society she might not be listed as extremely fickle.

But the analyzing of society, ancient or modern, according to the color of the hair, would not furnish very substantial basis for judging either women or men, blondes or brunettes.

It is what is just under their hair that establishes the real qualifications for any sort of duty.

Brains are all one color.

If the color of hair determined ability what would become of the unfortunates who haven't any hair at all?

Never mind about your hair, young lady readers. Don't bother about its color, and don't spend too much time "fixing" it.

If you are to be anxious about anything, be anxious about the inside of your head instead of the outside. That's the side that counts.

THE GIRL ON THE JOB

How to Succeed—How to Get Ahead—How to Make Good

By JESSIE ROBERTS

LIBRARY WORK

LIBRARY work has a great appeal to many women. A girl is sure of a good deal of liberty in such work, can add to its value and interest if she be so minded, and can feel fairly certain of permanent employment.

But the salaries are small, very small. Like the teacher, the librarian must struggle to make both ends meet and keep up appearances. She has usually had a thorough education and a special training that has cost money. Sometimes she begins her work with a debt to pay off. She often injures her health in the attempt to do this.

This is wrong.

I know one young woman who is librarian in a technical library. Everything about the work is attractive and interesting; the girl loves it. But she could not afford to keep the position were it not that she has a small private income to help, and no one dependent upon her. She gets only $1,300 a year, with a short vacation.

Libraries and library positions are to see a great increase in the next few years. Clever and well-bred women will be in demand. But how can such women afford, with living expenses what they are, to take positions so poorly paid?

There must be a change in these things.

The community must recognize that positions of this kind, which are an asset to the whole neighborhood, should receive a fair return. A good library cannot be good unless the librarians who work in it are well trained and first-class. Such cannot go on forever making sacrifices because they wish to serve the community, and love the labor they do.

It is high time to insist on a proper increase in library salaries.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"BUMPER."

USED in the sense of a "bumper" of wine—and therefore belonging to the malt, vinous and dead languages—this word harks back to the days of the Restoration when the drinking was deep and the shouting long and when, as penance for any slip of the tongue or forgetfulness of manners, the culprit was sentenced to drink a "bumper" without spilling a drop.

As this feat did not depend so much upon the liquid capacity of the drinker as upon the steadiness of his nerves, it was no light task—particularly well along toward morning. A large goblet or a small bowl was filled to the brim with wine and then a few additional drops were carefully added, so that the liquid would not overflow but would actually rise a fraction of an inch over the top of the containing vessel. The surface, being convex, was said to be "bumped up" and it was then accepted as a true "bumper." It is in this sense of "more than full" that we still refer to a "bumper crop" or a "bumper audience."

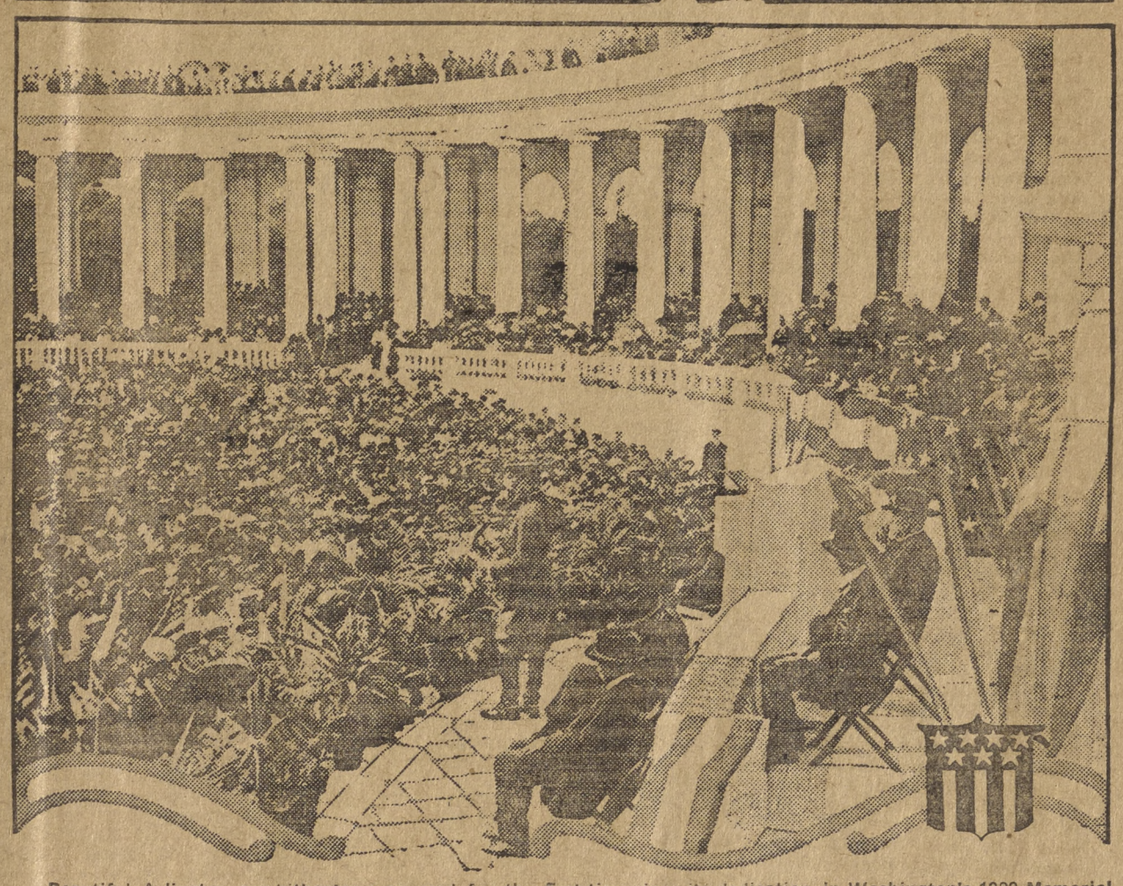
MONUMENT TO THE HEROIC DEAD



Beautiful Arlington amphitheater was used for the first time since its dedication, in Washington's 1920 Memorial exercises. General John J. Pershing is shown making the principal address to an audience which overflowed the massive uncovered bowl. Veterans of the Civil war were given prominent places among the listeners.

Just across the historic Potomac overlooking the capital of the nation from a commanding bluff is the noblest of American cemeteries, and from the midst of its verdant green is reflected in the morning sunlight a wonderful edifice of snow-white marble. It is the new Memorial amphitheater, the most splendid monument to the heroic dead ever erected by any nation. In beautiful Arlington lie buried more than 26,000 men, Union soldiers and sailors of the Civil war, from private and seaman to general and admiral, Confederate soldiers, soldiers of the Spanish war and soldiers and sailors of the regular army, navy and marines who have died in times of peace. It is the highest of honors to be eligible to burial in Arlington and while major generals and second lieutenants lie side by side near the men they commanded in battle, not one civilian, no matter what his influence, may find burial within its confines. Nor could one wish to lie down to final rest in more beautiful surroundings.

Over every foot of the slopes and vales of this magnificent reservation the national government provides for a most perfect care; the grass is kept green and cut and the bushes and shrubs cared for as in a royal park, while near the old Lee mansion the fragrant wistaria climbs over an extensive trellis where the Memorial day exercises have always been held, on all sides flowering shrubs contributing their living beauty and perfume to the impressive ceremonies on this day of the nation's remembrance. Every President of the United States since the Civil war, except one, has felt honored by an invitation to speak at Arlington on Memorial day.

Worthy of the Dead.

For many years, however, this wistaria-covered temple has been entirely inadequate for the rapidly growing throngs attending the services, and some thirteen years ago the Grand Army of the Republic appealed to congress for a building fitting the greatness of the nation's Valhalla. The white marble edifice, completed at a cost of $350,000, is the magnificent result. It is a great circular amphitheater with a seating capacity of 5,000. The marble is from the famous quarries at Danby, Vt., and is a dazzling snowy white. The location of the amphitheater is on the crest of the same high ridge occupied by the historic Lee mansion with its huge white pillars, but the former is located some distance apart, just outside of the heavily wooded portion of the cemetery which is filled with soldier graves. As years pass and the young trees surrounding the amphitheater grow the place will increase in beauty and majesty.

The first national cemetery was established at Gettysburg to make an honored resting place for those who on that great battlefield gave their lives that the nation might live, and then came the inspiration to make at Arlington a cemetery that would be national in its widest sense. To provide this final resting place for the nation's dead, the government paid to the heirs of Gen. Robert E. Lee's, wife, $150,000 for property which had been assessed in 1860 at $35,000.

The Arlington National cemetery embraces 418 acres and since its establishment the government has spared no expense to make it the most beautiful and attractive city of the dead upon which the sun shines. Over $1,000,000 have been thus expended in landscape engineering to enhance the natural beauty of the spot.

World Holds Nothing Like It.

The amphitheater is a majestic addition which constitutes Arlington the most magnificent of cemeteries. There is nothing like it in the whole world. Other nations have erected monuments to successful generals, admirals and statesmen. They have provided famous places of sepulture, as Westminster abbey, Pere La Chaise, the Pantheon, and the Pyramids of Egypt. But Westminster abbey is reserved for men of the highest distinction in any walk of life — statesmanship, invention, science, letters, philanthropy, as well as war. It is the same with Pere La Chaise, while the Pyramids were tombs for kings and queens only. But not so with Arlington cemetery. Here equality of service and sacrifice dominates. Commanding general and humble private are on the same level; the simple rule of eligibility for burial is the same; yet it is iron-clad. Wealth, birth, social station and political eminence, without military service, try for admission in vain.

At Arlington have gathered during the past generation the greatest of the nation's military heroes to listen to and to participate in eulogies and tributes to their silent comrades all encamped about, and here each year in ever-increasing number are laid to their final rest many of these same heroes of the wars. Every year sees a multitude of new graves in Arlington and every Memorial day witnesses the thinned ranks of the participants in the tremendous conflict of half a century ago which has contributed the great majority of the members of this Silent City.

On Honor's Roll

By Alice Williams Brotherton.

Weave the garlands, scatter the flowers
Over these sacred mounds of ours,
Lily and rose and laurel spread
Over the graves of those long dead,
Dead on the Field of Honor.

By each headstone the old Flag waves,
But know ye not these are empty graves?
Each man rose from the dust to fight
In the latest struggle of Right and Might,
To fight on the Field of Honor.

Forth in shadowy ranks they thronged
To answer the call of a people wronged,
Washington, Lincoln, Grant and Sherman,
Ay, and many a loyal German,
Rosecrans, Schurz and doughty Sigel
Who bore our Stars and Stripes and eagle;
"Stonewall" the stern, and chivalrous Lee;—
With our first troopship cross the sea!
These are the great Reserves who stand
Today at the back of our fighting band.

Women of France, 'tis yours to spread
Flowers on the graves of our newly dead;
We, while we strew these empty graves,
Weep for our dead across the waves
On the red Field of Honor!

Ancient Perfumes.

Perfume plays a large part in the affairs of the world—a much larger part than the average person casually thinks. Pleasing scents have had their influence in the affairs of mankind for so many centuries that reference to them may be found in the oldest chronicles.

According to Homer, Circe augmented her charms by anointing herself with various perfumes, and it was by the harmony of these perfumes that she bewitched Ulysses. Violet was the favorite perfume with the Athenians at feasts, funerals and other ceremonies. There were fountains of fragrant waters at the feasts of Nero. The perfumery-makers of the old time combined the scents of roses from Cyrene, violets from Athens, balsams from the orient and henna flowers from Egypt. Incense was burned at pagan rites and in Hebrew temples centuries before the birth of our Lord, and "ardent vervain" was offered up by the Gauls in their ancient rites. Great value was given to the use of perfumery in Europe by the returned Crusaders, who learned to value it during their travels and trials in the east.

Dahlia a Mexican Product.

The flower known to us as the dahlia and which has been cultivated from its original form into scores of varieties, is a Mexican product. It grows wild in Mexico and it was not an American but a European who first realized its possibilities. This discoverer's name was Vincent Cervantes, who carried the roots to his native Spain in 1784. Two or three years later the Swedish botanist, Dahl, who gave it its present name, cultivated it. Shortly after the Frenchman, Andre Thouine, made further improvements in its growth.

Oil for the World.

During last year the United States produced sixty-nine per cent of the world's oil supply. It amounted to 544,885,000 barrels and that of this country was 377,719,000 barrels. Mexico furnished sixteen per cent, and Russia six per cent.

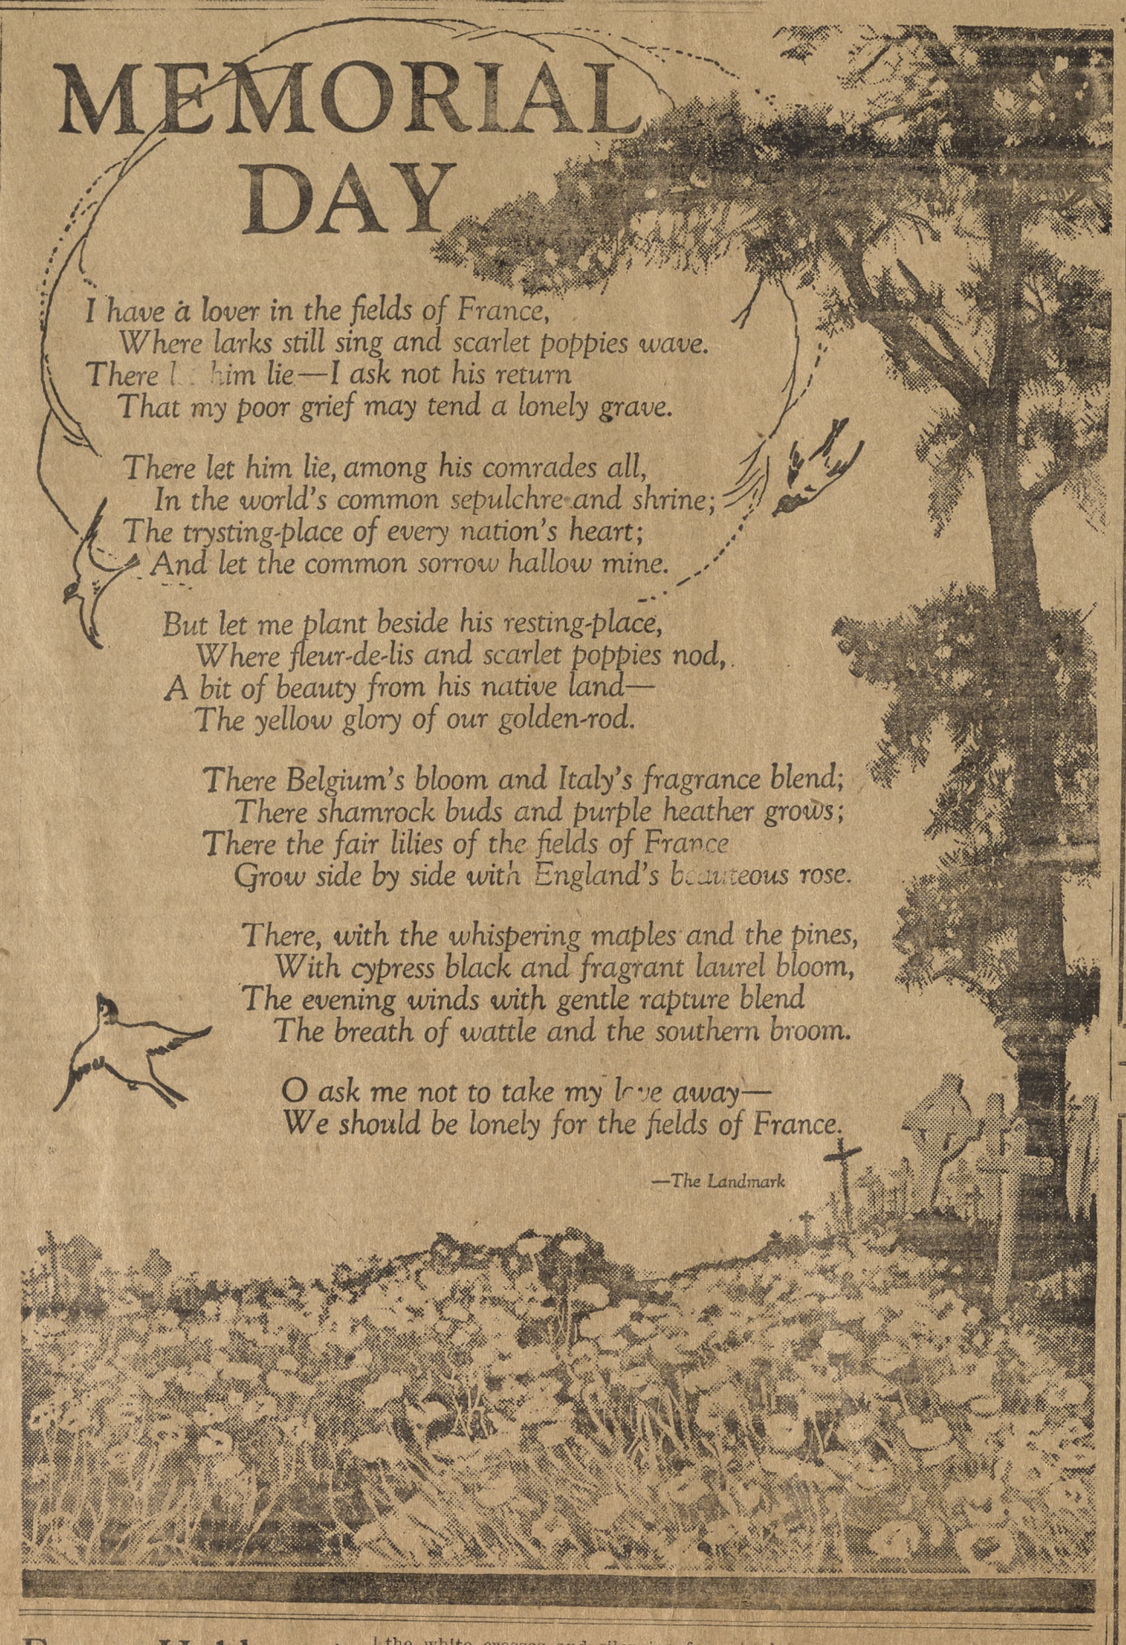
MEMORIAL DAY



I have a lover in the fields of France,
Where larks still sing and scarlet poppies wave.
There let him lie—I ask not his return
That my poor grief may tend a lonely grave.

There let him lie, among his comrades all,
In the world's common sepulchre and shrine;
The trysting-place of every nation's heart;
And let the common sorrow hallow mine.

But let me plant beside his resting-place,
Where fleur-de-lis and scarlet poppies nod,
A bit of beauty from his native land—
The yellow glory of our golden-rod.

There Belgium's bloom and Italy's fragrance blend;
There shamrock buds and purple heather grows;
There the fair lilies of the fields of France
Grow side by side with England's beauteous rose.

There, with the whispering maples and the pines,
With cypress black and fragrant laurel bloom,
The evening winds with gentle rapture blend
The breath of wattle and the southern broom.

O ask me not to take my love away—
We should be lonely for the fields of France.

France Holds American Graves Sacred

Only the slow chisel of time can carve the truth of history. That which we debate hotly and surround with words and eagerness and doubts and disappointments fades and is forgotten. Some simple fact, seldom upon our tongues and too obvious to be discussed, is left standing against the horizon.

The beginning of some such revaluation made itself felt on Memorial day last year. In the commemoration of the day here and abroad there was a silent power that all who participated could not but feel. Tears were nearer the surface than any one suspected, memories more poignant. The very thought of our dead lying in the soil of France, their graves covered with flowers by the hands of French women and French children, the bugles of their French comrades blowing over them, stirs the deeps of reverence and loyalty.

A scene in France, in one of the largest cemeteries in which American soldiers are buried, is thus beautifully described:

Scene Most Picturesque.

Beyond the wall masses of purple lilacs spread against the low red roofs of the houses. In the distance a few lazy clouds, in sky of blue, hung about the old cathedral spires. Bird calls and scent of flowers filled the air. At our feet low mounds and white crosses. Above our heads, at half mast, the Stars and Stripes.

Monsieur Gounelle, in black cassock, spoke in French and explained to his people the meaning of Memorial day. One felt, instinctively, their sympathy and love.

Then we laid on every grave a spray of flowers and breathed a prayer for the absent ones. Each girl felt personally responsible for each mound in the row she decorated. How clear the names on those crosses stood out even though a year had passed!

The French officers laid a wreath at the foot of the flag pole and one of them spoke with tenderness of the heroes who had gone on. Already there hung upon the pole lovely wreaths from the Ville de Chateauroux, from the French mothers association, and other local organizations.

The chaplain from the post at Montierchaume addressed us, and then three volleys rang out upon the air, the missives winging their way over the white crosses and silencing for a moment the song of the birds. A young marine faced the flag, saluted, and placed a bugle to his lips. Upon the warm clear air of that May day there floated down the sweet and plaintive notes of "Taps." And—it was finished.

Girls Scatter Violets.

But wait. Who are these? Out of the watching throng came young French girls, to scatter violets upon our graves. And they told us, oh mothers of America, that they would take our place next year, and in all the years to come. There will be flowers upon these graves this year.

Gradually the cemetery became deserted except for a few who lingered. A group of marines stood about the grave of a comrade very dear. Its marker was of stone and bore these words: "A true soldier beloved of his comrades." At one side a lad stood weeping and told us that his brother fell beyond the German lines.

Madame Gounelle, Georges and his mother came and talked with us. Love and sympathy shone in their faces as they told us of the honor that was theirs in caring for these graves. I thought of Georges' letter and his offer of the friendship of "a little Frenchman." Deep in our hearts there will live forever a memory of this "little Frenchman."

It was just the loving kindness of a kindly people and was thus, no matter where we went. Pilgrimages to the cemeteries at Suresness, Chalons, Fismes, Chatel-Guyon only served to deepen our gratitude to them.

Oh, Mothers of America, you need not fear. Again the mother hearts in France will leap the wide expanse of sea and utter a prayer for you as they drop their flowers upon our graves this year.

And above those glorious crosses, wherever they may be, ever floats Old Glory, as she whispers to the breeze:

I called them and they followed;
I guard them in their sleep.

Typifies Heroic Dead

Perhaps the highest keynote of Memorial day, either in this country or abroad, was struck at Suresnes, the high hill under the guns of Mt. Valerien, overlooking the city of Paris, to which President Wilson went last Memorial day to pay his homage to the several thousand American dead buried there. The first American monument abroad authorized by the War department was set up at Suresnes, France, last year, and unveiled as a part of the Memorial day observance.

The statue, then a plaster cast of heroic size, is the copy and conception of the typical American infantryman by Joe Davidson, the American sculptor. As finally done in granite it will be given by Mrs. Willard D. Straight "for sentinel duty at Suresnes."

Our photograph was taken during the Memorial day exercises engaged in by French and Americans last year.

STROVE FOR HUMAN LIBERTY

Armies Under the Stars and Stripes Had Always the Noblest Aims Man May Know.

For two decades the recurrent observance of Memorial day has been the regretful text for comment upon the dwindling line of "The Boys in Blue." The World war has given an added significance to the exercises of the day, which in all the years to come will be dedicated also to "The Boys in Khaki," the young men of this generation who so nobly carried on the noble record established by the men of the early sixties. And in between room will be preserved for the veterans of the war with Spain in Cuba and the Philippines.

It is a proud tradition that in each of these wars the armies beneath the Stars and Stripes fought for human liberty, not for greed of territory or lust of power, but, in the immortal words of Lincoln, that government of the people should not perish. And the outcome in each has justified the faith that "conquer we must when our cause it is just." A people that takes up the sword only in such circumstances and with such spirit finds in the solemn ceremonies of Memorial day a symbolism of patriotism, an avowal of faith that can never be quenched.

Risking his life, Philipp Bomar, a negro policeman of Los Angeles, rescued nine members of a family from probable cremation during a midnight fire recently.

Enforcement officers from San Francisco captured a still in the hills back of Dry Creek, west of Healdsburg. They seized ten gallons of brandy and arrested Paul Cavalo.

A Wise Investment for Landlords

The countless conveniences of electricity are now more widely appreciated by the general public. Electrically equipped houses are eagerly sought after by both buyers and renters.

Wire Your House This Spring

Wiring a house adds far more to its value than the cost of the work while the increased rent such a house will bring soon pays for the improvement.

Money appropriated by a house owner for electric wiring is thus well invested—it is not spent. We have a special proposition for landlords that is well worth investigating.

OLD FOX'S REVENGE

WHEN all the nuts were fixed to suit Grandpa Fox he put them away and brought out some very fine, big radishes, which he carefully scooped out after cutting them in half.

These he also filled with red pepper and glued together, touching the cut place with a bit of paint to cover the mark.

When he had a good pile of them finished he looked at his work with a broad smile on his face and carried them in a pan to the pantry window, where it was nice and cool, so they would not wither.

The next morning he was up long before the sun peeped through the trees in the woods; in fact, he had been awake nearly all night, so he might be the very first one up in the woods.

Grandpa took his basket of nuts and poured them on the ground near his house back of a bush, as if he had hidden them there.

The radishes he put in a basket and placed it under a tree and dropped his coat beside it so it would look as if he had just been in the garden working.

Then he sat down in the house by the window with a stick in his hand and waited.

He did not have to wait long for the Squirrel brothers were always up bright and early and called for Tommie Rabbit to come out and find some fun.

They came running along the path that led past the house where Grandpa Fox lived, when Billy Squirrel, who was quicker than the others, ran into Grandpa's yard.

He spied the nuts and back he went as quick as a flash and told the news to the others.

Tommie Rabbit did not care very much for the nuts, but he ran with Billy and his brother, and he spied the basket of radishes.

Looking around all three of them made sure that Grandpa was not in sight, and then they took all the nuts and radishes they could carry, and from his window Grandpa pounded the sill with the big stick and shouted: "Drop those, you little rascals; drop them."

Grandpa Fox knew that was all that was needed to make them carry off the nuts and radishes, so he pounded and called until they were out of sight.

"Stolen sweets are always the sweetest," he said. "That may be true in some cases, but I'll wager my pipe those youngsters will find out that is not a true saying always."

And they did, for Billy Squirrel did not bother Grandpa Fox any more. Such sneezing was never heard in the woods before, even the chicken with the whooping cough did not sneeze any harder, though they all found their heads and tails were safe when it was over.

Their mouths and throats were burned, too, and so for many days they suffered for their badness and now old Grandpa Fox can sit all day in the sun and no one bothers him.

THE RIGHT THING AT THE RIGHT TIME

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

WHEN YOU DINE

"Practice yourself, for heaven's sake, in little things and thence proceed to greater."—Epictetus.

NEVER take your seat until the lady of the house is seated. Never lounge on the table with your elbows, nor tip backwards in your chair.

Never play with your knives, forks, or glasses, but cultivate repose at the table. It is an aid to digestion.

Never make diagrams on the tablecloth with your fork or spoon to illustrate what you are talking about.

Never leave the table to get something that you want to show some one else at the table—to find a book to verify a quotation you have made or to settle a disputed point. These things can be attended to after the meal.

Never light cigar or cigarette unless you are asked to by your hostess or unless others are doing so. Never, under any circumstances, smoke between courses, but wait until after dessert when coffee is served.

Never tuck your napkin into your vest, yoke or collar. It is unfolded once and laid across the knees without a flourish. After the meal, at a restaurant or formal dinner, lay it unfolded at your place. If you are a time guest in the household and will remain another meal, you may fold the napkin in its original creases.

Never put the end of a spoon into your mouth, sip everything from the side of the spoon, and do this noiselessly. Never use a spoon when a fork will serve. Forks are now often used for eating ice cream, and salad is folded or cut with the side of a fork, never with the knife. Even small vegetables like peas are eaten with a fork.

Never hold your knife and fork up in the air when your host is serving you afresh. Lay them on one side of the plate when you send it to the host by servant or your neighbor at table.

Never leave your spoon in coffee or tea cup. Lay it on the saucer.

Never cool food by blowing upon it. Wait until it becomes cool enough to eat.

Never take a second helping at a large and formal dinner. You will find yourself eating alone.

Never make yourself conspicuous in any way by aiding the host or hostess in serving, unless especially asked to do so, or in passing dishes when servants are provided for that purpose.

Never push back your plate and finger crumbs at the conclusion of the meal. It indicates undue haste.

A wartime invention promising permanent usefulness is the throat microphone transmitter. Placed against the side of the throat when a person is talking, it transmits speech clearly, and without being affected by outside sounds. In a late type of the instrument, an ebonite handle presses the microphone against the throat and an ordinary small receiver against the ear, but for long conversations the throat microphone is mounted as an attachment of the head-gear receiver.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel.

ALBERTA

ALBERTA, meaning nobly bright, has its origin in the Teutonic language. It is one of the names coming from the nobility of which Aethel is the root.

Aethelbryht was its first form, though it was a masculine name and was given to the first Christian king of England. The famous bishop of Prague, who was martyred near Dantzig while preaching to the heathen Prussians in 997, was called Adelbrecht and his fame spread the use of the name throughout a great part of Europe.

Italy received it and straightway changed it to Alberto. It is from this latter that the feminine forms, Alberta and Albertine, were formed. The husband of the late Queen Victoria, who bore the name of Albert, brought both the masculine and feminine into great vogue in England. Indeed, it has since been accepted as a national name.

But, like all names which have a masculine and feminine equivalent, Alberta has no really individual existence. After all, she is merely a masculine name with a feminine termination. But unlike many of her contemporaries, such as Edwina and Roberta, she is almost frivolously feminine and is not regarded as a substitute name for the hoped-for son and heir who was to have been called Albert.

Jade is Alberta's talismanic stone. It has the power to assure its wearer great prosperity, and freedom from danger and disease. But it should never be removed from the finger, arm, or throat on which it is worn. Monday is Alberta's lucky day and 1 her lucky number.

How It Started

"NEWS."

IN THE earlier journals, before they were called "newspapers," it was the custom to print at the head the figure of a compass, symbolizing that the journal covered events in all directions. An enterprising publisher hit on the idea of printing the cardinal points, N-E-W-S, and in a short time every journal adopted the idea.

Revenue Officers Visit Niles Store

The candy store of Charles Cummings of Niles was visited by three revenue officers from Oakland last Friday evening, and the place searched for liquor, which the officers had been informed was being sold there.

A bottle containing whiskey was found in the store refrigerator, but this Cummings says, was for his personal use on account of a nervous trouble and had only been placed there a few minutes before the officers made their appearance.

Cummings had a hearing before United States Commissioner Hardie in Oakland on Monday and was placed under $500 bonds to appear before Judge Dooling in San Francisco on June 6.

It is the opinion of friends and everyone who is acquainted with Cummings that he is innocent of selling liquor and that watever amount was in his possession was for his personal use. This it seems is borne out by the fact that the business has nearly all the time been conducted by women clerks, Cummings only assisting at times when business is rushing.

A Valuable Hint To Housewives

Have you priced dwelling houses in your home town recently?

A short time ago a family in one of the Southern States set about the task of buying a house. Several "For Sale" signs, and quite a few realtors' advertisements were investigated. Then it occurred to the "Missis" to do a bit of investigating on her own account. She didn't enthuse very much over the prospect of living in a "second-hand" house, even at bargain prices. Furthermore, nothing in the way of a real bargain had been turned up in the house-hunting expedition. Her thought was that if it cost just a little more, she preferred a new house to an old one, so she asked the local lumber dealer for an estimate.

The very surprising result was that the good lady found that she could build for LESS than the asking prices of the older houses that were on the market. She not only would have the satisfaction of planning the house and having it built to suit HER needs, but it would cost less.

There is no need of continuing the story, as its conclusion is quite evident. It should be stated, though, that the occurrence was in a town of medium size in which frame houses can be built; lumber, therefore, forms the principal item in cost of material; furthermore, labor costs have declined more than in some of the larger towns.

But there are hundreds of towns in which conditions are quite similar and the decline in lumber prices has been general. Wherever frame houses can be built, certainly that is the economical form of construction at this time.

Wherever there has been any shortage of housing, rents and asking prices for dwelling houses have soared, and in few instances has there been any marked decline in these prices as yet. tI is entirely possible that in YOUR town a new house can be erected for less than a similar house can be bought. If such a condition exists, it offers a real opportunity to the live dealer.

Read
your instruction book
It says—

Old oil should be drained from the crankcase at regular intervals and replaced with fresh oil.

This statement is made because engine operation causes road dust, carbon, fine metal particles and other impurities to accumulate in the crankcase oil. The gritty oil circulates through the engine, impairing its performance, and ultimately leads to rapid depreciation and repairs.

These careful instructions from the manufacturer are often disregarded; cleaning the crankcase is a job generally disliked.

To meet this need Modern Crankcase Cleaning Service has been established by first-class garages and other dealers co-operating with the Standard Oil Company. These garages and dealers use Calol Flushing Oil,—the scientific agent that cleans out old oil, dirt, grit and other impurities and does not impair the lubricating efficiency of fresh oil used. The cleaned crankcase is refilled with the proper grade of Zerolene.

Look for the garage or dealer displaying the sign shown below,—it means "Better operation and longer engine life."
